This is genuinely a unique event that will challenge your thinking, inspire you into action and assist in making collaborative change.

By attending this event you will be championing diversity and ensuring stronger working relationships between men and women. This is where you can put into practice ideas that will bring immediate economic and social benefits to your organisation. Encouraging diversity in the work place across the country, particularly in non-traditional sectors, while highlighting the need for men and women to support each other through collaboration, is a must. Ask your colleagues to attend so that they too can also participate as well as learn how to facilitate inclusive conversations. Ask the right questions and create action!

Kelly Moy - Recruitment for Supply Chain, Manufacturing and Logistics, Hudson Australia.

Kelly is passionate about Supply Chain and Logistics and is a firm believer in people and skills being the best source of competitive advantage in Supply Chain Management. Using this technical approach, Kelly has been able to develop recruitment solutions to help clients focus on innovation, agility and cost reduction initiatives. With broad networks, Kelly has worked predominantly across supply and demand planning and transport distribution.

Prior to his recruitment career, Kelly worked as a Procurement Specialist (Supply Chain) for Schlumberger Oilfield Services in the UK and USA, with responsibility for planning, procuring and managing inventory (up to $500 million USD) for manufacturing and maintenance worldwide.

In early 2016, Kelly transitioned into the recruitment industry as a specialist consultant for Supply Chain and Logistics at Hudson. In this role, Kelly has focused on recruiting for middle management and high level white collar roles. Kelly is active in the Supply Chain community and assists in the organisation, promotion, and delivery of events.

Jim Mole - Chief Executive Officer, Ameropa

Jim Mole joined Ameropa in 2013 as CEO of a company storing, handling and selling more than one million tonnes of agricultural fertilisers annually. Jim came to Ameropa with significant business leadership experience gained both locally and overseas.

Jim has a proven track record for acquisition integration, strategy development and execution. Jim has also had considerable success effecting major organisational change management and culture development, as well as establishing strong and effective leadership teams and outstanding corporate cultures that foster high performance.
